CIC Heads Vote to Drop Spring Football Practice

By John Ritner

Central Intercollegiate Conference officials have voted to abandon spring football practice.

The officials voted 4-2 on the measure at a meeting of conference representatives at Emporia, Kansas December 2.

Virgil Yelkin, OU athletic director, said he and all other CIC athletic directors and football coaches in a separate meeting the same day had voted unanimously in favor of keeping spring football practice in accordance with the National Collegiate Athletic Association standards that state that the spring practices be limited to 20 practice sessions during a 36-day period.

Yelkin went on to say that OU will be meeting a possible four non-conference opponents in its first grid encounters in the upcoming years who probably will conduct spring drills.

Those schools in favor of abandoning the spring drills were Emporia State, Fort Hays, Omaha University and Washburn. Pittsburg State and St. Benedict's were the only conference members in favor of keeping the spring workouts.

Dr. A. Stanley Trickett, chairman of the OU Faculty Athletic Committee and the school's CIC representative at the meeting was quoted in The World-Herald as saying he voted against spring football.

In the article, he said, "I have always voted against spring football practice."

When asked about the matter Wednesday, Dr. Trickett hurriedly said that he and OU President Dr. Milo Bail had conferred on the matter a few years ago.

Head football coach Al Caniglia seemed very unhappy over the move in that his gridders will be deprived of keeping interested in and familiarized with the system.

He also labeled the spring work outs as a time to teach fundamentals to new personnel and to give them an opportunity to become part of the system employed at the University.

He agreed with Yelkin saying that it will be difficult to prepare his squad to meet early season non-conference opponents who have spring practice.

The reason for abolishing of spring drills was because of extra cost, allocation of coaching staff time and interference with spring sports.

Board of Regents Approve Tuition Hike for Fall, '62

By Chuck Barry

The Omaha University Board of Regents Saturday approved the proposal for a tuition hike from $7.50 to nine dollars a credit hour beginning in the fall semester of 1962.

This will mean resident students will pay an increase of $22.50 per semester for a 15 credit hour load, or a total of $135.

Non-resident students will pay double ($18 per credit hour) for a total of $270 for an average 15 hour load.

This is the first tuition increase since 1959 when it was changed from six dollars to $7.50.

In noting that three fourths of the $400,000 additional revenue from the tuition hike will be used to raise salaries, President Milo Bail pointed out, "We have an outstanding faculty and we must pay them more if we are to keep them."

He cited a gap in full and associate professors' salaries of almost 18 per cent, and seven per cent respectively. These figures are based on the 1960-61 academic year of 24 public universities as compared to Omaha U.

In dollars, this means that OU professors are receiving a minimum of $7,600, an average of $8,723, and a maximum of $9,000.

Associate professors at Omaha U. are receiving a minimum of $6,000, an average of $7,484, and a maximum of $9,000.

The 24 other universities pay an average of $10,910 for professors and $8,320 for associate professors.

The tentative proposal for 1962-63 salary increases, which would come from this additional revenue, was presented to the Board of Regents. This provides for an average six per cent salary increase.

The new salary range for professors would have a minimum of $8,600, an average of $9,600 and a maximum of $10,600. For associate professors the salary range would provide a minimum of $7,200, an average of $8,200 and a maximum of $10,000.

According to Dr. Bail, this equating of salaries is the result of the financial "shot in the arm" and this will enable OU to keep the people it already has and, if not expand, maintain our current quality of education.

Dr. Bail also pointed out that OU's goal is for the student to pay his share this year and the taxpayer next year. The University will seek a one mill increase in the mill levy in 1963, which would bring approximately an additional one-half million dollars to OU.

The remaining one-fourth of the revenue which will be gained through the tuition hike will go for maintenance and equipment.

Choir to Present Christmas Convo

A Christmas convocation will be presented by the University of Omaha Choir December 20 in the auditorium. The choir is under the direction of John D. Miller.

The program at 10 a. m. includes a narration, The Babe, and the announcement of the winner of the Christmas carol contest. The contest is sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha.

$4 Fee Due For Pictures

By Carol Vetter

Years after receipt of his degree, the graduate takes pride in thumbing through his yearbook and pointing to his picture—yes, he was a member of the class of 1962.

If you, as a senior, wish to have your picture in the 1962 Tomahawk, it is necessary that you follow two important steps as soon as possible. The first step requires that a fee of $4 be assessed at the cashier's office in room 230 of the Administration building.

An appointment must then be made at Kilpatrick's Photo Reflex Studio before Jan. 18. It is hoped that most seniors will follow these steps before their return from Christmas vacation in order to avoid a last minute rush.

As of Wednesday, Dec. 13, only 101 of 736 seniors had paid their $4 fee. If there are any questions as to procedure, please contact Paul Peterson in room 130 of the AA building.

All mid-semester graduates who will not have paid a two-semester activity fee will be required to pay $3 in order to receive a copy of the Tomahawk. This fee will be assessed at the cashier's office. Any forwarding address should be given at this time in order to assure receipt of the yearbook.

Registrar's Lease IBM Machines

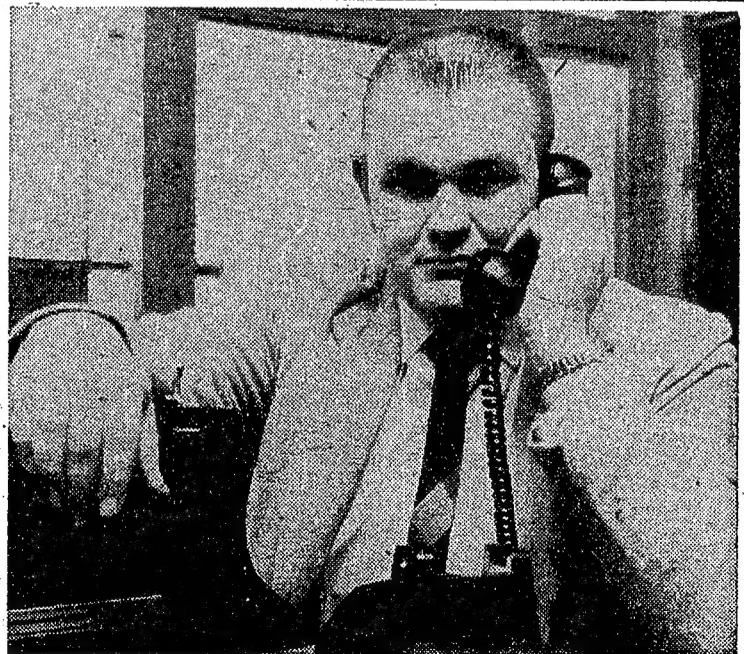

The Registrar's office has recently acquired three IBM machines: a key punch, a verifying machine and an assorting machine.

These three machines will be used to create the initial punch card records and process these records for use in the registrar's office.

Permanent records will stay on the manual system now used. Those records on the IBM machines will be class cards, change of program cards and grade reports.

B. L. Byars of Data Processing said, "It is hoped that the IBM system will be in order to be used for summer registration of 1962 and fall registration of 1962-63."

The machines are leased to the University on a monthly basis from the IBM Corporation.

Bill Vogt, presently managing editor, will serve as Gateway editor for the second semester.

Board Names Vogt Editor

Bill Vogt has been selected to edit the second semester Gateway, the Board of Student Publications announced last Friday.

Currently serving as managing editor, he has also been a Gateway reporter.

Vogt, a senior majoring in journalism, attended Iowa State and served two years in the Army prior to coming to Omaha University.

He edits video tape for WOW-TV and was night-side reporter for the Bellevue Press.

Vogt hopes he can continue the papers policies in as efficient a manner as his predecessors."

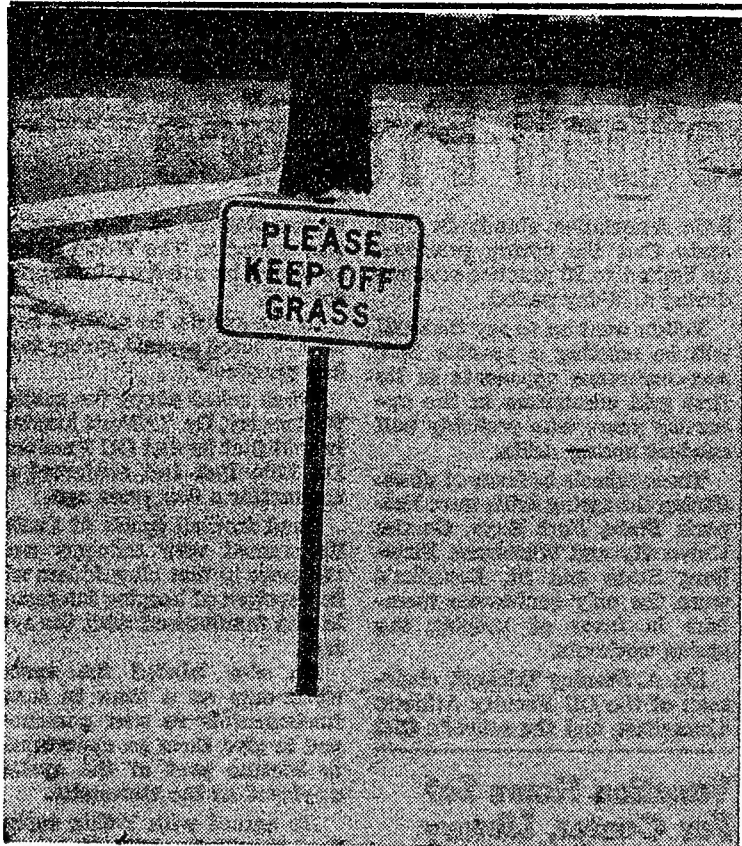

He said he would like the Gateway to be "a real stimulation to student thought on some of the major issues of campus life."

Vogt named his second semester Gateway staff Wednesday afternoon.

Sleepy Politics Soon to Awake

By Paul Beavers

Campus organizations of Young Democrats and Young Republicans apparently are trying to get rolling again.

But from the indication of Ouampi Room chatter, the "organizers" are having a tough time. It is not too difficult to understand why.

The political fever of last year's election campaigns has died down, if not completely collapsed in a heap of campaign literature.

The Democrats narrowly nixed Nixon and Caroline is romping on the White House lawn.

Morrison is holding safety conferences, trying to figure out why the Interstate is rough and making speeches to "bring industry into Nebraska." Cooper is back selling feed.

Politicking on a local level has drifted back to a "ho hum" attitude. It won't be that way long.

During last year's campaign madness, nearly everyone was brought into the act. Grass roots stumping, rallies, barroom arguments and student demonstrations on the nation's college campuses were common.

The buttons—the red and white and blue hats—the elephants and the donkeys were seen more often than Greek beanies.

Professional political organizers did a remarkable job in rounding up coeds who would cheer at Eppey Field at the arrival of a candidate, much the same as if it were a pop singer who stepped off the plane.

Some of the placard-waving supporters were so far left they didn't notice the action in right field. Many of us were guilty.

With the ashes cold beneath the pots of campus political organizations, it would be wise to ponder the situation before the ashes begin to smoke, then spark, and suddenly burst into flame.

Unquestionably, political parties need support. And the boys who make the party decisions know college campuses are prime targets for gaining that support.

With a big state election coming up next year, the party bosses will be moving back to OU and other campuses.

The Boyles, Morrisons, Seatons, Thones, Hendersons and others will be trying to drum up support for one candidate or another.

But let's not be snared by grandeur alone—the songs, the pledges, the red, white and blue. Caution is required.

It's been said we should take an active interest in political happenings. No argument there.

But let's make sure it's "interest" and not just activity.

Alpha Xi Delta Plans Yule Paddle Party

Alpha Xi Delta will hold its pledge-active Christmas party Dec. 20 at the home of active Karen Pope.

Pledge paddles will be presented to sorority mothers at the party and gifts will be exchanged.

Social chairman Sue Hornish is in charge of the event.

Alpha Kappa Delta Holiday Party Dec. 10

Alpha Kappa Delta, honorary sociology fraternity, will have a Christmas party Dec. 16, at the home of John Ballwig.

Alice Kurz is in charge of the preparations.

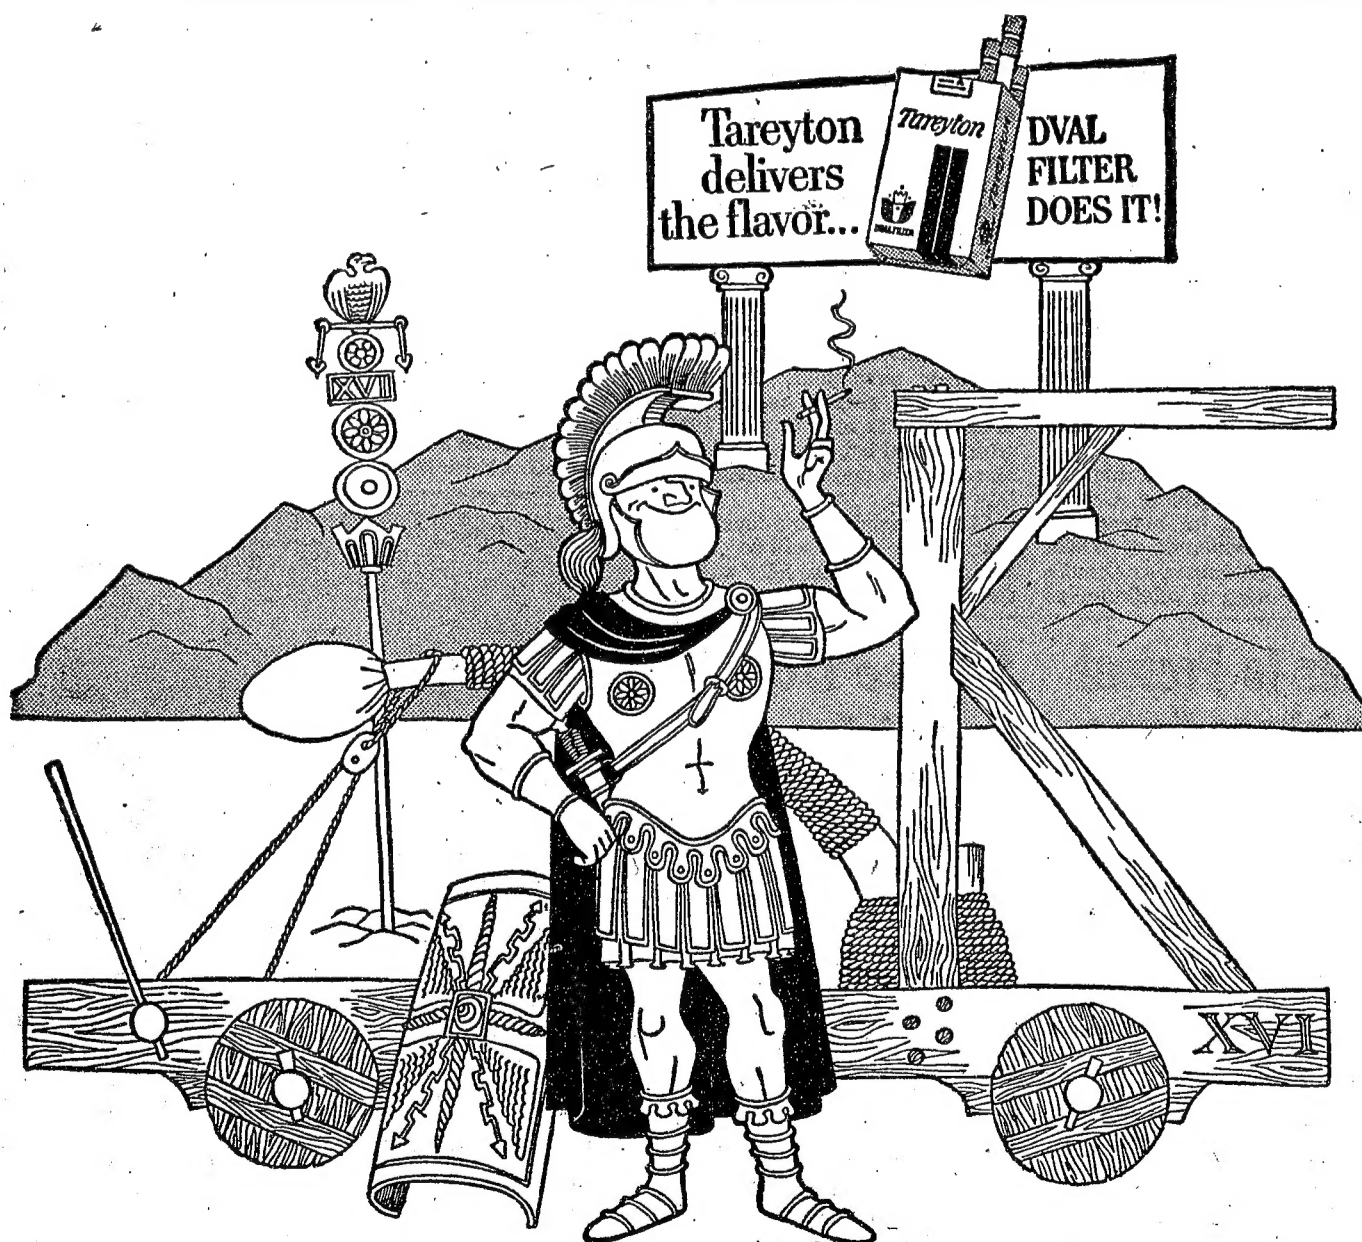

The club had a supper meeting Dec. 13 in the Student Center cafeteria at 5:30.

Greeks to Play Santa At Christmas Home

Tau Kappa Epsilon and Zeta Tau Alpha will play Santa to the children of the First Christian Home in Council Bluffs, Dec. 23.

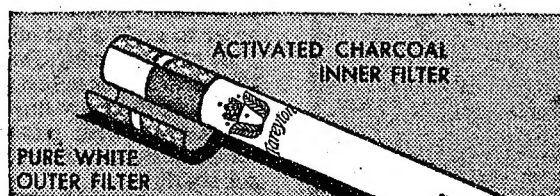

Pledges of the two groups will collect toys from business firms and distribute them at the party.

Denny Madigan and Bev Merica are planning the event.

Beyond 30

By Ken Zimmerman

This column last week apparently struck a nerve or two.

And, judging by the comments elicited, it stepped on some toes, perhaps unjustly and too heavily.

But it was nevertheless no more than one man's opinion and I appreciate the men of our armed forces whose job it is to defend the right to express that opinion.

I never said anything to the contrary.

I said no more than what has been said over countless cups of coffee and many a glass of beer. But because my words appeared in print, they seem to have taken on greater significance, have become more offensive and have branded me as everything from "un-American" to a "frustrated child."

"Beyond 30" has never been any more than an opinionated, one-sided, sometimes spur-of-the-moment comment. In many cases it has been aimed at stirring readers to thought on something which has taken on a controversial nature.

In this respect, last week's column was successful. The Bootstrap program has probably been discussed more during the past week (on this campus) than at any time since its inception.

It's unfortunate that so many failed to recognize the "babblings of an immature mind" as an out-spoken, biased observation that is certainly open for criticism and enlightenment.

Too many of those who chose to pen a reply merely grabbed the American flag and waved it vigorously.

I don't feel I ever tore it down. I will never concede that a frankly-stated opinion, no matter what it is, represents anything "gutless, childish, narrow-minded or ridiculous."

There was a name on that column which is more than was on most of the "childish, immature, narrow-minded and ridiculous" "letters" which found their way to the Gateway office.

To the Bootstrapper who forgot to sign his name to the two-page, single-spaced "rebuttal," I don't believe I asked if you loved your country but I'm glad you do.

I think it's unfortunate that you have not benefited by your world travels and all-your-military experience. I think you've missed something.

And the "barrier between us" you speak of was erected long before last Friday.

I regret the personal affront which many Bootstrappers took at the terms "pencil-patriot" and "professional student."

They were not original, however.

There was no intention of attacking or criticizing any individual on this campus. Rather, there was an expressed disagreement with the Bootstrap program in the way it operates, a disagreement held personally since the program arrived in Omaha.

If the Bootstrappers feel the program should be free from such criticism, that's their business. I don't see it that way.

I don't, personally, believe the column stands as a minority-of-one opinion but instead reflects some of the grumblings heard daily among many non-Bootstrappers.

It is such talk that prompts the writing of many of these columns. To bring such controversy out in the open and call it to the attention of those who were, perhaps, unaware it exists is sometimes better than allowing it to remain under the table.

Sometimes it is not.

Editorial Comment

Several letters to the editor concerning Ken Zimmerman's "Beyond-30" Column in last week's issue of the Gateway won't be found among those printed below.

The omission of these letters was in no way brought about by their content but by the lack of it. In each case the author neglected to sign his letter.

It has been a long-standing policy with the Board of Publications that no unsigned letters be printed. A nom-de-plume may be used at the author's request but a copy of the letter, complete with the author's true identity is necessary for Gateway files.

The reasoning behind this policy is simple; a writer will strive for accuracy when his name is to appear on such letters or if readers have access to his identity.

No official stand or policy has been adopted by the Gateway staff concerning the controversy created by Mr. Zimmerman's column. It reflected only his opinion and was not meant to be representative of anyone else connected with this publication.

Drop Bootstrap Squabble

Regarding last week's "Beyond 30," one irate bootstrapper asked a member of the journalism faculty why he "isn't more careful of what gets into the Gateway."

The answer is simple. Rarely does any member of the faculty see material written for publication in the paper until it actually appears in print. This is an exercise in responsibility for journalism students. It does not always work out to everyone's satisfaction, and sometimes the journalism faculty must field complaints from dissatisfied readers.

Complaints do not necessarily indicate poor journalism practices. On the contrary, they often act as a barometer to indicate that thought has been stimulated. This is no more "dangerous" than strenuous exercise, which stimulates the blood in a body stiff from long inactivity.

College students, members of the military, and anyone else whose life must fit into a more or less routine pattern should find it refreshing to take a little time off to think.

Mr. Zimmerman's column, being bylined, reflects only his own personal views, and not necessarily those of the Gateway.

Whether readers agree with the column or not, they should recognize in it a statement that a problem exists. With this realization should come constructive thought as to a possible solution.

Mr. Zimmerman does not charge windmills. He is a respected professional newsman as well as a serious student of journalism at OU.

Those who would have him eat his words have only to confront him with authoritative facts, and he will do so gladly, if he feels he was in error.

Name-calling is no rebuttal. Facts are Mr. Zimmerman's business, and if he was in error, it must be proved, not by dissenting opinions, but by facts.

If the column failed to elicit any constructive response, let's drop the issue. With the conclusion of this letter, I for one already have.

The Reason Why

Recently a column appeared in this paper entitled "Over 30". Its purpose was rather vague but it has created a bit of controversy. The column mentioned was based on the author's opinion. It is appropriate then that an opinion be offered to bring out additional information concerning this matter. What follows is not an effort to criticize but to clarify.

In the past few years the military has emphasized the role of education for members of the Armed Forces. This emphasis has taken the form of a requirement that all officers must have a college degree. An officer must have a degree to be fully qualified and he must be fully qualified for promotion purposes. At least once each year every officer is rated by his Commanding Officer regarding his efficiency on the job.

These reports are utilized by the military as a basis for promotion and retention or dismissal from the service. In the case of attendance at a school the report is forwarded by the Registrar. In this instance the individual's grades take the place of the efficiency rating. Poor grades or failure to complete this course of instruction is paramount to failure in an assignment.

In order to qualify for the Final Semester Program at least 101 semester hours must be completed prior to making application to the school. The remaining 24 semester hours are completed in one semester plus a short session. During this period the maximum number of credit hours authorized by the school must be carried.

One of the prerequisites of the military is that the serviceman must have at least four years remaining in the service upon graduating. There is no military or Federal aid given other than approval of a temporary absence from his place of duty.

In addition to attendance requirements there is the problem of a family. In most instances a 6-month separation is normal. If the family comes along, the movement or storage of household goods is done at the individual's expense.

To successfully complete the course every instructor requires each student to absorb a basic amount of knowledge. This level

'Welcome; Don't Ridicule'

I object. Yes, I fervently object, not to the freedom of speech, but to the use of eloquent language to express the thoughts of an immature mind.

"Bootstrappers," that somewhat derisive term, used by the juvenile mind to describe dedicated people is unfair, thoughtless and ridiculous. These elder colleagues, whose buddies lie beneath the 30,000 white crosses at Anzio and the almost countless thousands resting under crosses elsewhere, deserve more understanding than that.

It is, perhaps, easy to look upon them as being competitive, eager students who offer a challenge to their younger friends. These "bootstrappers," who went to the Philippines, Africa, Italy, Europe and many other battlefields, fighting and dying to make it possible for a free America with a freedom of speech, could not attend universities because their country needed them elsewhere.

Senility, does not begin at 30. The kind of minds we need to continue to protect our American heritage are represented by those who now come to college to take up the torch of learning they had to drop to enable the younger students of today the privilege of free education and speech they now enjoy.

They should be welcomed, not ridiculed. They should be honored, not defiled.

Education, it seems to us, is the process of adding information to an inquisitive mind. That it should be reduced to competition for high grades by Mr. Zimmerman, indicates to me, that he has lost sight of the real purpose of the University.

The fact that older people who have had many experiences which could add to the knowledge of our brilliant professors seems to have been lost to some of their young colleagues. Never have I heard a bootstrapper attempt to correct his professors. Any comments I have heard have been constructive. I for one have not only enjoyed their contributions but have profited by hearing them.

The brilliant "over 30" bootstrappers have to be intelligent, dedicated and eager in order to operate this highly complicated defense of ours. Is it surprising that these capabilities should not be limited to military matters? In due fairness to the misguided student, who thinks that grades are the sole object of going to school, it should be pointed out that the period in which a student learns the most easily is at sixteen years of age or shortly thereafter. As a person grows older, learning becomes harder, and the advantage lies entirely with the younger student unless he is lazy.

The young student can learn his subject in a few hours of study while the older ones have to spend days to acquire the same information. This determination to pay the price in days of work, not hours, should be respected, not ridiculed.

I am not a "bootstrapper" but I respect and admire them. I am for more of them, no less. They contribute much by their presence to the high standards and reputation that Omaha University now enjoys.

Irene H. Kelley

Dear Gateway Editor,

Is it possible that these Bootstrappers keep us "regular students" on our toes and possibly enrich courses through some of their experience-gained knowledge?

Their experiences are extensive! However, they surely have no more natural mental ability than the youngster of eighteen years. I am not sure that "experience is the best teacher." Through effort and application, we youngsters should be able to match their scholarship.

How can we be sure that their wealth of experience and their age are the important factors in their "A" grade achievements when for example, they study six hours a day, six days a week on a three credit course in the summer.

These "pencil patriots" should not frighten any of us who came to college to learn and to work hard!

is required regardless of the method used in testing or the individual's standing in comparison to the other members of the class.

As stated previously, "Over 30" is for the most part correct. In essence it states that every Bootstrapper is doing the best he can with whatever resources are available. This schooling is an assignment that has been given on the basis of certain qualifications. It is expected that this assignment be completed by the individual to the best of his ability. As in other assignments there have been distracting influences but as one ex-Bootstrapper put it, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead."

Proposed Applied Arts Wing Bids Let Today

EXISTING BLDG ← 1961 ADDITION
WEST ELEVATION

The proposed Applied Arts Building Addition is one step closer to reality, as shown in the accompanying diagrams.

Costs for the new southwest wing are estimated to be around $200,000.

Architects John Latenser and Sons prepared the blueprints for the 48 by 120-foot addition. Bids will be taken today and opened January 15.

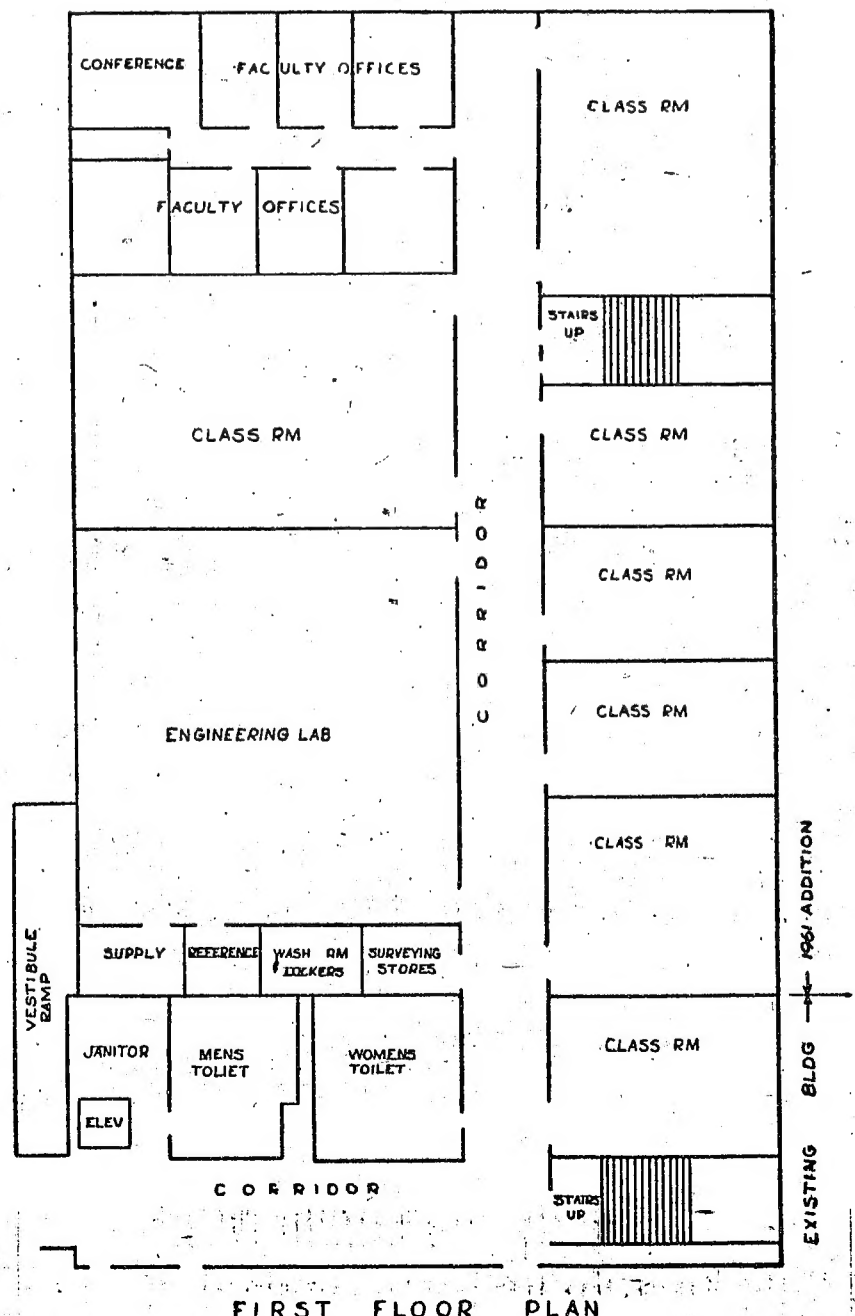

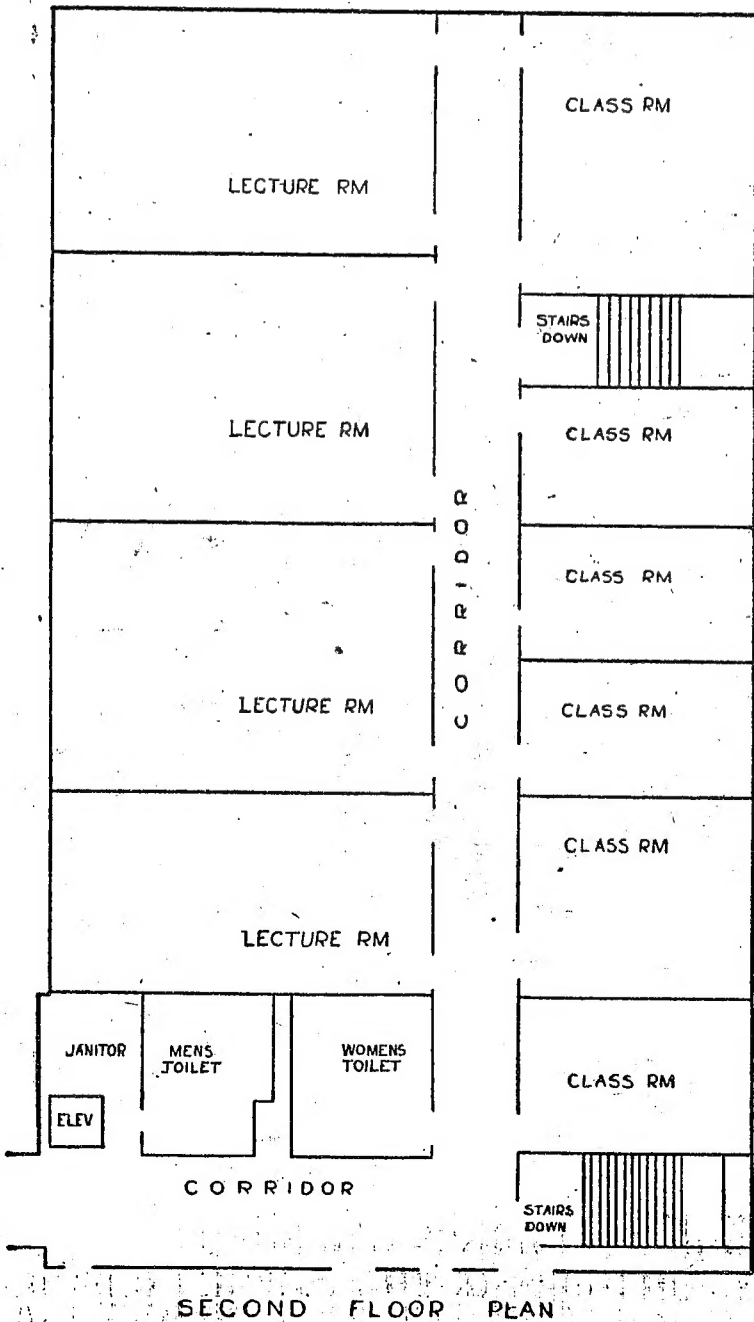

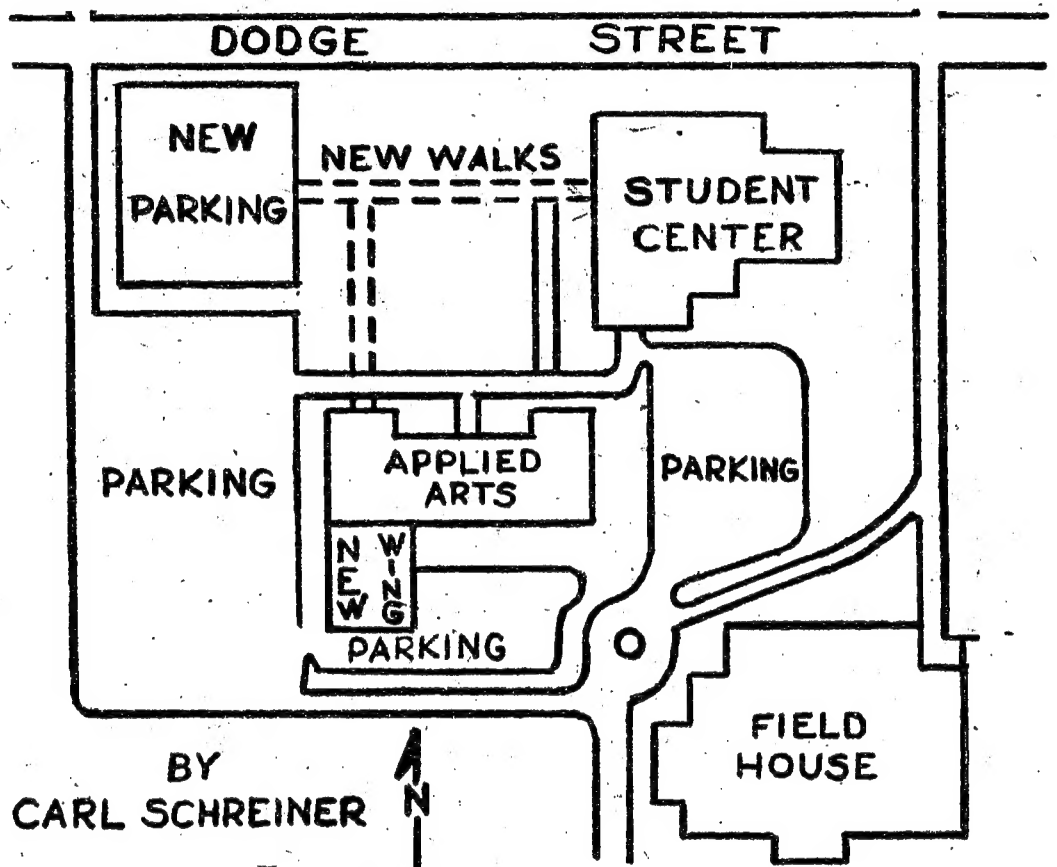

Construction is planned to be completed by the summer session of 1962.

The wing will contain eight classrooms, a lecture hall, and an industrial engineering laboratory.

The laboratory will expand the scope of University of Omaha engineering instruction by providing facilities for research in steam and other specialized areas.

The classroom and lecture facilities are intended to release some of the crowded conditions resulting from an increased enrollment, and will be shared among the departments.

The wing will project into the parking lot immediately south of the Applied Arts Building. The already-constructed lot at the northwest corner of the campus will help relieve any additional pressure on parking the wing may cause.

AF-ROTC Units Pass Inspection

The Omaha University AF-ROTC unit has passed the annual inspection with a "satisfactory."

Lt. Col. James T. Frantz, Jr., was the inspecting officer. He visited OU's campus Monday and Tuesday and reported everything "in order."

As TSgt. Robert M. Hasaka summarized, "the shorter the inspection officer's report is, the better condition we're in. Ours was about two pages."

In the Colonel's report, he stated, "The military operation of the ROTC detachment is being accomplished in a highly satisfactory manner."

He commented on the "enthusiasm" of the OU cadets and also cited the harmony and cooperation in the relationship between the college administration and the AF-ROTC unit.

Colonel Frantz requested one minor change in the OU unit and rated it as one of the better units throughout the country." (There are 173 colleges and universities with this ROTC program.)

The Board also accepted the resignations of John Leonard, assistant professor of business administration, and Mara Davis, hoped-for women's physical education head.

The seven conferences around the country include: North Central, South Central, East-West, Mid-States (Eastern Division), Mid-States (Western Division), Tri-States, and the half Coast College Conference.

Matches are bowled each week

Those representing Omaha U in this league are: Robin Hill, Ken Socha, George Schabloske, Al Kirk, Al Whittaker, Frank Tapy, Tom Doherty, Ray Florom, and Jerry Bauerly.

In its opening match of the season, Omaha U won all four points against St. Cloud State College to move into a tie for first place in points with St. Mary's College, who took all four points from Tarkio College. St.

Mary's, however, holds the edge in total pins over Omaha U.

Individual honors for Omaha U in its first match went to Al Kirk and Robin Hill. Kirk posted a 547 series and Hill had the high game with a 200.

OU Grapplers Face Rugged Test Tonight

By Ken McEwen

Omaha University wrestlers will face stiff competition tonight at 8 o'clock in the Fieldhouse.

The team can only improve over last year's match with State College of Iowa, as the Panthers downed the Indians last year 27-2.

The Iowans were not only tough on OU, but compiled a 10-2 record against the rest of the competition they faced.

Against Big Ten Conference teams they have compiled a record of 57 wins, 31 losses and 10 ties.

The Panthers have nine lettermen returning this year, one in each weight division.

Frank Freeman, at 130 pounds, has a 19-2-2 mark for two years.

The Cedar Falls grapplers finished eighth in the NCAA national tournament last year.

Last week Graceland College of Lamoni, Iowa, turned back the Omaha U wrestlers 17-15 in a dual meet at Lamoni.

Louie Miloni captured the only pin for the Indians while George Crenshaw and Arch Ferguson won on decisions. Jim Howard and Randy Curnow ended up with draws.

The reserves lost only one of their matches.

27 Recommended For Grid Awards

Football Coach Al Caniglia has recommended 27 Omaha University gridgers for varsity awards and 16 others for 'B' team awards. The varsity list includes 14 Omahans.

Those recommended for varsity letters are:

Third-year awards—Gary Baughman, Art Ferguson, Dave Gibson, Barry Miller, Louie Miloni, George Payne, Al Taylor, Dean Taylor.

Second-year awards—Wayne Backes, Paul Blazeovich, Max Jones, Duane Salak, Roger Sayers.

Blazeovich on AP All-America

Paul Blazeovich, Omaha University end from Wall, Pa., has been named to the second team on the Associated Press Little All-America team.

The 195-pounder who transferred here two years ago from El Dorado, Kansas Junior College, caught 30 passes for 446 yards and five touchdowns to lead the Central Intercollegiate Conference in pass receiving this year.

Blazeovich will team with half-back Louie Miloni as OU co-captains next year.

Roger Sayers, who averaged 9.7 yards-per-carry this year and gained a total of 1,084 yards in two seasons, was not listed on either the first or second team.

OU Cagers Start Road Trip After Two Straight Wins

By Mike Moran

Omaha University's basketball team embarks on a grueling weekend road trip today with an even record and some confidence that maybe they didn't know they had.

The reason—two straight wins at home over Doane and Midland and a tenacious defense that held the former Indian tormentors to the 50-point mark in both contests.

The road trip begins tonight with a game at Hastings with the Hastings College Broncos. Omaha bested the outstaters 82-81 last year for their first win of the year and a repeat performance is expected from Jim Borshlem's rejuvenated Indians.

Saturday night the Omahans take on the Fort Hays Tigers at Hays, Kansas, in the CIC opener for both teams.

Fort Hays has won their first five games and most recent of their victims was Kearney State of the NCC, 100-90. Kearney beat Doane earlier 88-47.

The contest will be the first real test for Omaha and a chance to show the other conference members that the Indians are no longer the doormats of previous years.

As if these two games weren't enough, the Omahans must hop a bus after the Fort Hays game and travel a long road to St. Louis for a Monday night game with the Bears of Washington University.

Washington has long been a power in the Missouri Valley area as far as basketball goes and the Indians can reap much prestige with a win over the Bears on their home court.

Among the teams played already this season by the Missourians are Missouri of the Big Eight and Wisconsin of the Big Ten. The Bears are definitely a "big time" basketball school as was Drake for the Indian footballers.

The game in St. Louis concludes pre-Christmas activity for the Indians and they will not be in action again until they meet Emporia State at home on Jan. 3.

The satisfying Omaha wins of late brought a couple of relatively unknowns into the spotlight.

Bernie Miller, a freshman from Ralston, blossomed with 10 points in the 73-52 romp over Midland's defending Tri-State champs and contributed a heady floor game.

Dave Hagglund, sophomore from Omaha, came to the rescue of foul plagued Larry Villnow and contributed a fine rebounding effort in both games. Dave is one of three lettermen from last year's squad.

Freshman Bill King still leads the Indians in scoring with 67 points and a 17-point average through the first four games.

Doane College matched their shooting percentage with the frigid temperature outside the fieldhouse and dropped a 72-52 decision to Omaha's torrid Indians on the Omaha's court Tuesday night.

The Indians, seeking their second straight win, were slow in starting but opened both barrels to lead 34-19 at intermission.

The Omahans took up where they left off the second half and proceeded to set a season high of 46.4 percent shooting while building a 70-45 lead for the subs with about four minutes remaining.

The Indians silenced Doane scorers and only one Tiger managed more than three field goals in the performance.

Bill King and Bruce Hunter led Omaha with 17 points apiece and King showed the fans some of the sensational shots which made him famous in Omaha circles last year.

Larry Villnow contributed a fine rebounding effort before leaving with 4:57 left and managed six baskets from short range.

The Indians chalked up their first win of the young season last Saturday night with a convincing 73-52 romp over Midland in the fieldhouse.

The win definitely marked the end of the dominance of Nebraska college teams over the Indians.

Bruce Hunter, playing his finest game of the year, led Indian scorers with 20 points. Close behind were Bill King with 13 and Joe Neuberger and Bernie Miller with 10 each.

Larry Villnow, Omaha University freshman, drives for lay up in the Indians' 72-53 win over Midland last Saturday.

Vet Hunter Gains on Cage Leaders

Junior lettermen Bruce Hunter, who started the 1961-62 cage campaign on the bench, has been the spark of the two straight University of Omaha basketball wins.

Hunter who was the Indians top rebounder last year, pumped in 17 points and grabbed 17 rebounds in the OU win over Doane Tuesday night. Hunter netted 20 points and grabbed 12 rebounds against Midland Saturday.

He now has a total of 46 points and 36 rebounds in the four games, and is hitting at an even 500 percentage from the floor.

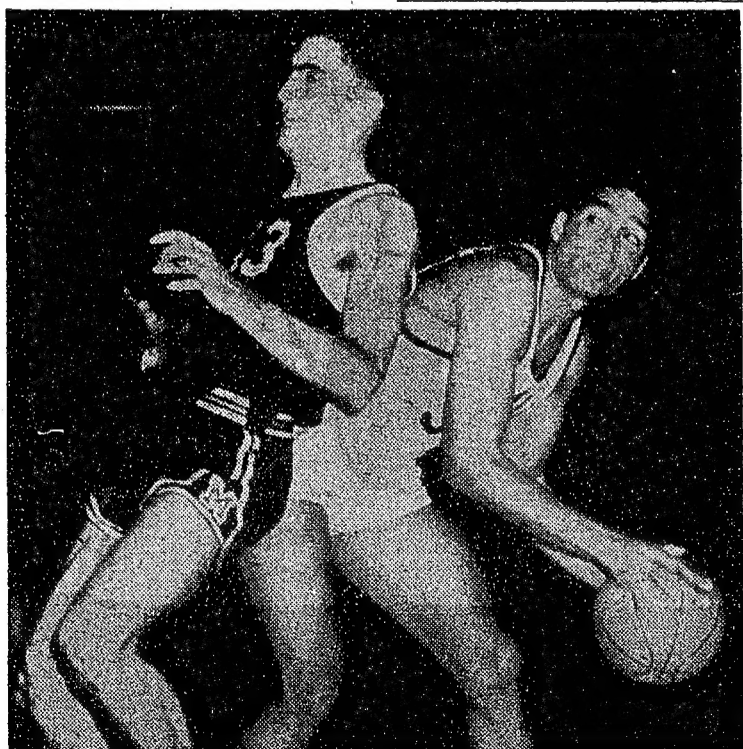

Bill King, freshman from Tech High, continues to lead OU scorers with 67 points for a 16.8 per game average. His high game was against Peru in the season opener when he hit 25 points.

CIC Champion Wins Camellia Bowl Fray

Pittsburg State added prestige to the Central Intercollegiate Conference as they defeated Linfield, Oregon, 12-7 in the NAIA Camellia last Saturday.

The Gorillas, the No. 1 small college team in the nation, defeated Omaha University 34-18 for the CIC title in November and were undefeated during the 1961 season.

Late starter Bruce Hunter has jumped to second in team scoring for the Indians.

Education Still Best Investment

By Leigh Wilson
and Rusty Harnson

Education is still the best investment. This is the almost unanimous opinion voiced by the Omaha University faculty regarding the $1.50 an hour tuition increase.

Most of the increase will go for faculty salary raises—especially on the professor level.

"The students get what they pay for," head of the chemistry department, Dr. D. N. Marquardt, told the Gateway. "Universities today have to pay more for high quality instruction," he added.

"It's a matter of values," said math instructor Harry Rice. "Students are here for an education. If they don't want to pay for it, they shouldn't be in school."

Head of the physics department John McMillan said he doesn't like to see prices rise for anything, but tuition here compared to other schools is low. "Standards must be maintained," he said, "and about the only way to do that is with money."

He added that taxpayers are already carrying a pretty large portion of the financial load and that further burdens should be on the students, who are directly benefiting.

Assistant Professor Paul Borge said that he thinks students will be willing to meet the increases. "It's a pretty cheap price for a fine education," he said.

More than $275,000 of the expected $400,000 yearly increase will go for salary increases.

One professor indicated that he was prejudiced in commenting because he stood to benefit, and another said he thought everyone should receive a ten per cent. increase. This faculty member indicated money buys talent and competency in our society and OU is presently affected by such a situation.

Volunteer Bureau Needs Leaders

The Omaha University branch of the Volunteer Bureau is requesting men and women to sign up to be leaders of small groups of children at the Omaha Social Settlement, 3069 Q.

Any student desiring more information can come to the Volunteer desk in the Student Center every Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Trio Returns From Europe

By Linda Bolton

Dean Donald Z. Woods of CAE, Assistant Dean O. W. Snarr and Ben Zeff, SAC education director, have returned from a tour of various American military education installments in Europe.

The purpose of the three-week tour was to describe the educational opportunities offered through various degrees at Omaha University, to appraise the educational programs being offered on the military bases and to learn the ways in which the educational needs of the overseas military men and women can best be met.

During the trip, workshops were held at three major air bases—High Wycombe near London, Nou, Asseur near Morocco and Torrejon near Madrid.

Participants were instructors of schools in the area associated with American military installations. The OU-SAC representatives followed them back to the individual schools where further discussions were held.

Dean Woods said the principal impression left by the tour is "of the tremendous interest SAC takes in helping its people advance themselves by providing educational opportunities for them."

He added that Mr. Zeff "is doing a tremendous job of providing the necessary leadership and support for the educational program."

The three talked with many former OU bootstrappers who spoke favorably of the bootstrap program here at OU.

In Madrid, they were entertained by Dr. and Mrs. Jay B. MacGregor, who left Omaha in the summer of 1960. Dr. MacGregor is a former OU Dean of Students.

They also visited several times with Dr. and Mrs. Garland Wollard, also formerly with the University. Dr. Wollard is in charge of the schools for the children of military personnel.

In spite of their busy schedule—going from base to base, visiting with the administrators and teachers of the various school-on-base programs and the workshops—they were able to see such points of interest as herds of fighting bulls pastured in the high foothills near Seville, the art museum in Madrid and the home of Cervantes.

Dean Woods could find only one unfavorable point of the trip—they all became "reluctant experts at getting suitcases packed and re-packed in a hurry."

Next Movie to Be 'That's My Boy'

"That's My Boy" will be the next movie shown in the Student Center Ballroom.

William J. Gerbracht, Director of Student Activities said, "the movies will be shown in the evenings instead of afternoons as in the past."

"That's My Boy" will be shown in the Student Center Ballroom at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 8.

Student Conducts Seminar as Project

A Parliamentary Procedure Seminar is being given by an Omaha University student, Dennis Dunning, as a speech project. The first session was Thursday. It will end this Tuesday in room Adm. 302 at 3:30 with a mock club session.

Everyone is invited by the Newman Club and the ISA. Admission is free.

Students must obtain permission from the Student Activities office in the Student Center to place notices and posters on bulletin boards.

Four-year-old Doug Everett, son of 1961 OU graduate Robert Everett, paraded through the Omaha U Student Center last week advertising for last Friday's "Toys for Tots" dance sponsored by Arnold Air Society and the Angels. The "Toys for Tots" barrels will be in the halls until this evening.
